Responsible Gaming and Self-Exclusion

Responsible Gaming

For most of our users, gambling represents entertainment, fun, and excitement.

However, we are aware that for some people, gambling can have negative effects. In medicine, pathological gambling has long been recognized as a serious illness.

From the very beginning, we have been concerned about this issue and have done our best to help. Under the concept of “Responsible Gaming”, we include various measures through which a gambling operator can help reduce the risk of negative effects. If such effects have already occurred, we take active steps to mitigate them.

The most important tool against these negative consequences is knowledge and education about the risks of gambling, as well as supporting our users’ self-control to prevent harmful consequences.

Useful Tips for Responsible Gaming at <https://www.apuesterapido.com/>

We recommend keeping in mind the following tips before you start playing to ensure that gambling remains a fun activity without negative effects:

- Set a deposit limit for yourself.

Before you start playing, think about how much you can afford to spend based on your financial situation. Play only with amounts intended for entertainment.

- Do not chase your losses.

Avoid taking unnecessary risks to recover what you have lost. Play for fun, not as a way to make money.

- Set a time limit.

Decide how much time you want to play and stick to that limit. Gambling should remain in balance with other activities and not become your only pastime.

- Play smart.

Avoid gambling when you are very stressed, depressed, under pressure, or under the influence of medication, drugs, or alcohol.

- Take breaks.

If you notice that you are tired or losing concentration, take a pause.

- Only one account per person.

To have better control over your time and money, we recommend keeping only one account per person.

Protection of Minors

Self-Exclusion

If you have been diagnosed with gambling addiction or wish to stay away from gambling for any other reason, we are here to help.

Self-exclusion means that you voluntarily choose to exclude yourself from all gambling services. This exclusion will be irrevocable during the selected period.

If you wish to self-exclude, please write to our support team indicating a period between 6 months and 5 years. They will explain the next steps and requirements.

 Email: contact@apuesterapido.com

Please remember: self-exclusion is permanent during the chosen period and cannot be revoked.

During this time, you will not be able to open a new account. Attempting to do so will constitute a violation of our Terms of Service and may result in the permanent blocking of your original account.
